306th Bombardment Group Association

By Walter H. Keilt, 368th

Who was Boike?

Boike was a dog. He was also the crew mascot for my gang, which flew "Weary Bones" 42-37943 (368th G Model, tail letter L).

Boike first made his appearance one October 1943 evening in the BOQ at Grand Island, NE. He was accompanied by six assorted crew member sergeants, and a mysterious looking flight bag.

"Lieutenant, this is Boike, our new mascot."

Five-Pound Wonder

He didn't look like much, being of doubtful lineage. He was all black except for a small white patch on his chest and white paws. He weighed all of five pounds. Somewhere in his background was Scotch terrier blood..

"Are we correct in assuming he is flying to the U.K. with us?" the four officers questioned.

"Oh yes. He is definitely flying over with us and will be a full fledged member of the crew."

"What happens to Boike when we have to go to altitude and have to put on oxygen masks?"

"No problem, sir. We have all that taken care of," whereupon the mysterious flight bag was opened and eager hands produced a standard oxygen mask which had obviously been modified by an additional strap.

"But, does it fit?"

"Oh, yes. As you now can see it fits securely over his snout." And, indeed it did, with no apparent leaks.

"Ah, yes, but what happens if we have to jump out and hit the silk?"

Boike's Own Parachute

Back to the bag again and out came a small parachute and special "dog" harness made by some sympathizing parachute packer. It was very tiny, but fit snugly around his chest, stomach and front legs. The chute diameter was alleged to be about six feet. And, so it was agreed that Boike was indeed an official crew member (Turn to Page 2)

San Antonio Prepares for 306th Invasion Next September 6-8

The 1990 reunion committee at San Antonio has completed the general plan for REUNION 90. Thursday through Saturday, 6 September through 8 September are the dates for this event.

M/Gen Delmar Wilson, the original deputy c.o. of the 306th Group, is the chairman for the reunion, and C. Dale Briscoe, treasurer of the Association, is serving as the reunion coordinator.

Says Briscoe: "There are still a myriad of details to be finalized, but we think the following information will give you an excellent idea of what to expect. And, we think those of you who have not visited San Antonio since cadet days 45 or 50 years ago, or even in the last ten years, will find this city a delightful, fascinating place to spend some of your time."

Special Rates for Extended Stay

September, has agreed to extend our special rates for the period 4 September to 11 September, in the event that you want to extend your stay in San Antonio.

This is the smaller of the two Marriotts in downtown San Antonio, but it was selected so that we didn't have to share the hotel with another convention. It has sufficient facilities to accommodate 306th people, and the staff has had much experience dealing with military reunions. It is also located within easy walking distance of many of the major tourist attractions.

Reservation forms appear on page 8

These Pictures May Be Yours!

Through a circuitous route, the secretary has come into a set of pictures of 306th aircraft and other scenes.

These had been used by a son in a paper which he turned into a Los Angeles high school teacher some years back. For some reason, they were not returned, but were passed along to another teacher who had an interest in WW II combat aviation.

Now they are held by Russ Strong, and he will be happy to transfer them to the rightful owner, if he will only make himself known. (Then, he can stop asking his son as to when his pictures are going to be returned!)

Stalag XVII-B

The Stalag XVII-B American Former Prisoners of War will hold a reunion in Albuquerque, NM, 1-5 May 1990 to celebrate the 45th anniversary of their liberation from prison camp. For further information, contact Reunion Chairman Leo L. Gallegos, Sr., 11005 Haines Ave. NE, Albuquerque, NM 87112. Phone 505/299-5213.

of this issue of Echoes. About half of the rooms look out over the unique riverwalk area. Those who register early will get these preferred rooms, so early action on your part may be desirable.

Dinner Features

The two major scheduled evening activities are a typical Tex/Mex Buffet, with a mariachi band, in our hotel on Thursday evening. There will also be available between 6 and 8 p.m. four barges on the River of the Roses for those who might like to take the 45-minute cruise before or after they eat.

It had earlier been thought that the dinner itself might be held on the barges, but not enough could be secured to make this possible, so this unusual arrangement has been made. The same 45-minute cruise can be taken any day from the river level entrance of the Marriott, with a barge leaving each 15 minutes, and at a cost of $1.75 each.

We are planning two concurrent tours of Air Force Bases for Friday morning. Since they are concurrent, you can only choose one. One tour will go to Randolph Air Force Base which we all remember as "West Point of the Air." This event will include a "windshield" tour of these facilities, a briefing by the staff and a movie highlighting the history of Randolph AFB and its position in the development of air power through the years. The tour will be followed by lunch in the Randolph Officers Club.

Lackland Parade

The second Friday morning tour will go to Lackland Air Force Base where many of you and/or your children and possibly your grandchildren were first introduced into the military service of the United States. At Lackland, the members of the 306th Bombardment Group will be honored at the Graduation Day Parade featuring the basic airmen who are completing their basic training that week. The parade will be followed by a briefing by the base staff and lunch at the Lackland Non-Commissioned Officers Club.

Saturday morning we will have the usual annual meeting of the Memorial Association. While this meeting is in progress the spouses will be treated to breakfast and a style show featuring styles of the Southwest. We expect to provide special entertainment along with the style show but have not yet made final plans.

On Saturday evening we will have the Reunion Banquet. Final arrangements for the program are not complete as yet.

Recent Deaths

Wesley E. Courson, 423rd pilot and POW, died 17 Aug 89, according to Air Force Times. He joined the 306th in Jun 43 and was MIA on a raid to Hannover, Germany, 26 Jul 43. He retired from the USAAF 31 Jan 46 as a second lieutenant. He was a native of Alabama, but his latest residence could not be determined.

Richard V. Fowler, a gunner on Gordon Donkin's 367th crew, died 20 Oct 89 in Lanett, AL. He came to the 306th 29 Jun 44 and departed 25 Sep 44.

Howard O. Hunter, Jr., 367th bombardier, died 5 Jan 83 in Valona, GA. He came to the 306th 1 Feb 44 on Irwin Schwedock's crew, and was with the same crew when members were interned in Switzerland 24 Apr 44 on the disastrous mission to Oberpfaffenhofen, which cost the 306th ten aircraft. This was his twelfth mission.

Billy J. Lamb, 423rd tail gunner and POW, died in 1984, it has been learned. He was credited with at least one enemy aircraft, and was with Lt. Robert H. Smith on 21 May 43 when Smith and his entire crew ditched in the North sea and survived more than thirty hours in the water. They were picked up eventually by a British mine sweeper. On 26 Jul 43 he was with Lt. Wesley Courson, when their plane was shot down on a raid to Hannover, Germany. He was a prisoner in Stalag XVIIB.

Trygve C. Olsen, 369th pilot and POW, died 20 Dec 89 in his Holiday, FL, home after an extended illness. He and his wife attended the '89 reunion in Little Rock, AR. Olsen had joined the 306th 5 Oct 43, and on his twenty-third mission, to Stettin 11 Apr 44, went down while flying as pilot for Capt. James Opdyke.

Millard S. Oscherwitz, the navigator on Robert Vielle's 367th crew, died 22 Oct 89 in Wilmette, IL. He was with the 306th from 5 Feb 45 and flew at least fifteen missions. For years he was presi-

Claude F. Taylor, a painter and dope and fabric specialist with the 449th Sub Depot, died recently in Edinburg, VA. He came to the 306th in Jun 43 and completed his overseas serving in Dec 45.

Henry E. Warren, a waist gunner on Robert W. Smith's original 368th crew, died 3 Nov 89 in Folsom, CA. He was with Fred Gillogly 14 Apr 43 at Bremen, Germany, when they were shot down with nine other 306th planes. Warren remained free on the ground for a day and a half before being picked up by the Germans, and then joined many other 306th men in Stalag XVIIB.

Strange Views Of WWII Combat

If you want to get an irritating look at World War II, stop in at your favorite book store and look into several new books.

"The Second World War" by Martin Gilbert is another British look at the war which makes short shrift of the aerial action, and in fact does not mention the Eighth Air Force or its role in combat. Very little mention is even made of the RAF.

When you finish with that book, look up "Total War" by Peter Calvocoressi, Guy Wint and John Pritchard, another British production that also fails to mention the aerial combat which took place over Europe.

There is also a new Canadian book out which takes a dim view of American participation in the war, and in its sole mention of the Eighth Air Force records the startling fact that a B-17 crewman who had already received an Air Medal and three oak, leaf clusters was wounded on a mission and did not fly for several weeks! This isolated incident has no bearing on the story being told at the time.

We are living now in a period when many younger authors are looking into ancient history, have arrived at their own conclusions and then written books to prove their theories about how the war was fought and won. Their own nationalistic leanings are given full treatment and with little attention to the Allied war effort.

Expect to see more of this in the next 25 years!

Boike — Combat Dog

and was going to war with us.

One afternoon months later, during a "stand down", into the officers' quarters came the enlisted crew with determined looks on their faces.

"Lieutenant," someone said, "we have decided that Boike is not a real member of our crew as he has not even flown a single mission. All he does is eat and get fat."

"So what?" we asked. "What can you expect of a mere dog?"

"We have a mission planned for him," was the answer. "He is going to make a parachute jump and then he will be a real crew member."

"And how is he going to make this jump?" we asked.

"Very simple, sir. In two days, as you know, we are scheduled to slow time a new engine on 'Weary Bones'. We, including Boike, will be on board and you will fly over Thurleigh with flaps down, as slow as you can fly, and we will drop Boike out of the tail gunner's hatch."

"You have to be kidding," was our incredulous answer. "If the chute doesn't open we will all be murderers and I could be court martialed for 'dog murder'."

Can't Fail, Says Crew

"But sir, we have done everything to make this a no-fail mission. We have enlarged the harness, installed a static line on the chute and tested the whole thing by dropping it attached to a rock from the control tower. We can't fail and Boike will be as safe as it is possible to be.

"Besides," they continued, "we will have a photographer on the ground taking pictures. We will take pictures of him just before he hits the ground. We'll send the pictures to Stars and Stripes and we'll all be famous."

No amount of protesting from us could deter the crew from going through with this doubtful event. And so, on 5 June 1944 at 1000 hours "Weary Bones" was seen flying at 1,000 feet over Thurleigh with half flaps at 120 mph. Aboard was the entire crew, with the exception of the bombardier, who was on the ground traveling with a base photographer in a jeep.

Boike was all harnessed up with his static line attached and ready to go!

Out Came Boike!

After the third pass the fateful deed was done! Out came Boike. The static line did its job and down came Boike, the chute blossoming over his head. Upon wracking the ship over on its left wing, we could all see Boike rapidly speeding to the ground with hind feet dangling, suspended by a chute that seemed too small.

Down, down he went and after some thirty seconds Boike hit the ground, hind feet first. He let out a yip and at full speed headed for the nearest patch of trees some thousand feet west. The jeep was unfortunately on the wrong side of the field, but someone took note that Boike ran to the woods and lifted his leg on the first tree he came to.

In the meantime, up in the air, over the radio came the question: "Ship flying over Thurleigh, what are you doing, throwing a dog out of your aircraft?"

"Thurleigh, this is 'Weary Bones' 943, we are just testing a parachute."

"Roger, 943, Thurleigh tower out."

Editor's note: Unfortunately, the flying control log for 5 June 45 makes no mention of a dog parachuting out of a B-17.

Col. Williams (LTC Robert C.), who just happened to be in the tower at the time, grabbed a telephone and called 368th squadron operations:

"What are you crazy guys doing, throwing a poor, defenseless dog out of an airplane?"

"Its o.k., Colonel, that was Boike's seventeeenth jump!"

"O.K., 368th, we were just wondering what was going on."

And so that was the end of Boike's famous jump and he was now an official member of Keilt's crew.

While no photographs were taken of the descent, Boike was picked up by the jeep and driven to 368th headquarters where the accompanying picture of him was taken before his parachute was removed.

Boike continued to live near the mess hall and reached a weight of thirty pounds. As far as anyone of the crew knows, Boike remained at Thurleigh long after my crew went home.

Two Pilots Write About Their 1945 Collision

'Fire In #1 Engine'; First Warning

By Herbert B. Cohn

Kerney Gibson, our flight engineer, was the first to see it coming. "FIRE IN NUMBER ONE ENGINE," he called.

It all started in a routine way. Wake up call for the 306th Bomb Group in the early hours of the morning. As a pilot in the 368th Bomb Squadron, I was included in this sleep shattering event. After taking care of the morning necessities, breakfast followed. Next came our briefing for today's target.

The date was 7 March 1945, and the target was Giessen, Germany. The 306th would be up today, but our ship was designated as the spare ship. Our squadron commander informed me that if no ship aborted and we wanted to get credit for the mission, we could fill in the hole in the third element of the high squadron. This was the 423rd.

A Beautiful Morning

The group was airborne, rendez-voused, and was on its way to the coast. No one aborted and we filled the assigned position. Since each squadron monitored a different radio frequency, only the squadron commander received and acknowledged my report that I had taken up my position. It was a beautiful, clear morning with the sun shining directly at us as we crossed the channel and headed for our visual target. Dark sun glasses were worn by all. This, of course, obstructed peripheral vision. But everything was serene with no bandits in the air or flak to dodge.

We hit the I.P. and started a right turn to the target. That's when it happened. The number two plane in our element, piloted by Lt. Clifford L. Steiger, began his normal change of position. He was slipping down to the hole we occupied. My attention was focused up and to the right on the element leader. Vision to the left was obscured by the sun glasses and the raised left wing as we turned. That's when Gibson called in alarm to attract my attention in that direction.

As I looked to the left, I realized it was impossible for me to tighten the turn to the right as the number three plane was too close. At that instant, the tail of Steiger's plane was in my number one prop. All kinds of thoughts flashed through my mind in an instant. As the other plane began a dive to the right, I pulled back on the steering column and banked left. This took us over the other plane as we separated. I immediately put "Elizabeth" into a dive as Harry Hinkle, my co-pilot, hit the feather button for number one engine. A fast glance indicated the prop on that engine was gone.

After diving 500 feet we had regained cruising speed but now we were in the prop wash of the lead squadron. We continued our dive for In the seven two-plane and one three-plane collisions experienced during combat, the 306th usually suffered high crew casualties, in addition to the loss of aircraft. Late in the war, however, there was a two-plane collision over Germany in which there was only one man killed. Both pilots are still living, and each consented to write about the event from his own unique viewpoint. Herbert B. Cohn joined the 368th 3 Feb 45, while Clifford L. Steiger came to the 423rd 16 Feb 45. They met, so to speak, on 7 March 45 on the bomb run at Giessen, Germany, north of Frankfurt.

an additional 300 to 400 feet. As we leveled off, we were able to rejoin the group as part of the low squadron.

The bomb bays were open and we were only minutes from the drop. Again, the unexpected. Our visual target had disappeared under a cover of clouds. The secondary target was another ten minutes away and off we went only to encounter the same problem. We finally heard "bombs away" followed by "bomb bay clear" after a run on our third target. In total, we had traveled for about a half hour with the bays open and at almost full throttle on the three operative engines.

It was time to head for home and we dropped out of the formation in an attempt to conserve fuel. At debriefing we related the events of the day.

Steiger's Crew Returns

Several days later, I happened to be in the debriefing room when the crew of the other plane arrived. They reported having been hit by flak and losing their tail gunner in addition to the loss of elevator controls. They had gotten back to Paris and bailed out. The automatic pilot was inoperative and "Dear Mom" was seen to crash in the nearby fields.

The unexplained puzzle: how did we fly all the way to the target without anyone on Steiger's plane seeing us or reporting our position to the pilot? Where ws their tail gunner, top turret gunner, radio operator, or anyone else in position to see us and alert their pilot at the time he started to shift into the hole? In all the years since this eventufl day, I have wondered about the answers to those questions.

High Chance Of Combat Collisions

By Clifford B. Steiger

The potential for accidents in combat was enormous: some happened, some did not. Many small things contribute to an accident waiting to happen, and one happened 7 March 45 over the IP on the bomb run to Giessen.

Why did this accident happen? What small things contributed to its possibility? Different radio channels among squadrons? No set Group Policy on positioning the flying spare? The 423rd's new policy of bringing the #3 man of the low and the #2 man of the high element in trail with the element lead to concentrate the bomb pattern on the ground? Lack of experience on the part of the pilot of Dear Mom? (Second mission as pilot). Failure of crew in reporting position of flying spare? Moderate flak?

It should not have happened, but it did. With no warning on the intercom, the first indication of something wrong was a violent vibration with simultaneous nose down and roll to the right. On the way down full left aileron stopped the right roll and the airspeed alone brought the nose up. We had no elevator or rudder. As the nose came up we jettisoned the bombs and a skidding, level flight could be maintained. I looked up at the squadron, which was about ten thousand feet above us, and decided that there was no way that we could reight Copilot Dane Roberts notified the crew not to bail out yet and asked for a damage assessment on the intercom. Waist gunner Robert Tucker and ball gunner Herschall Hay reported that the tail gunner, Hal Rial, and the whole tail gun position were gone, and that Hal's chute was still hanging by the waist door. We assumed that we had taken a direct hit by HE.

I then asked navigator Ernest Dragoo to get us a heading out of Germany. We were at 12,000 feet and in the vicinity of Dortmund. By experimentation we discovered that we could turn right very well, but could turn left only with

NB: Note that neither crew was flying with waist gunners, which was the standard operational procedure at this stage in the war. differential power. Skidding level flight could be maintained at 180 MPH. Slower, the nose dropped, and faster, we could climb.

While on a heading to France occasional small arms fire was reported zinging through the aircraft. Dear Mom had recently gone through an engine change, and we were using up our fuel very fast. We determined that we could not make it back to England, so we tuned in the radio beacon at Y-70 in France and homed in on it.

We advised Y-70 of our predicament and heading as we crossed the station. We advised Y-70 that we were bailing out, and they indicated that an ambulance was dispatched to pick us up. We bailed out at 10,000 feet over a solid overcast, the base of which was reported at 2000 feet.

After the crew were all out, I knew that the A/C would go into an immediate right spiral after releasing the aileron control, and after struggling through the forward hatch, I found that it sure did.

I elected to free-fall until I could be sure that the A/C would not spiral into me on the way down. After breaking out of the overcast, I pulled the rip cord and soon saw Dear Mom crash about three or four miles from where I came down. She did not burn but was scattered far and wide.

We all got down in good shape except Herschell Hay, whose parachute dragged him through a barbed wire entanglement that lacerated his face badly.

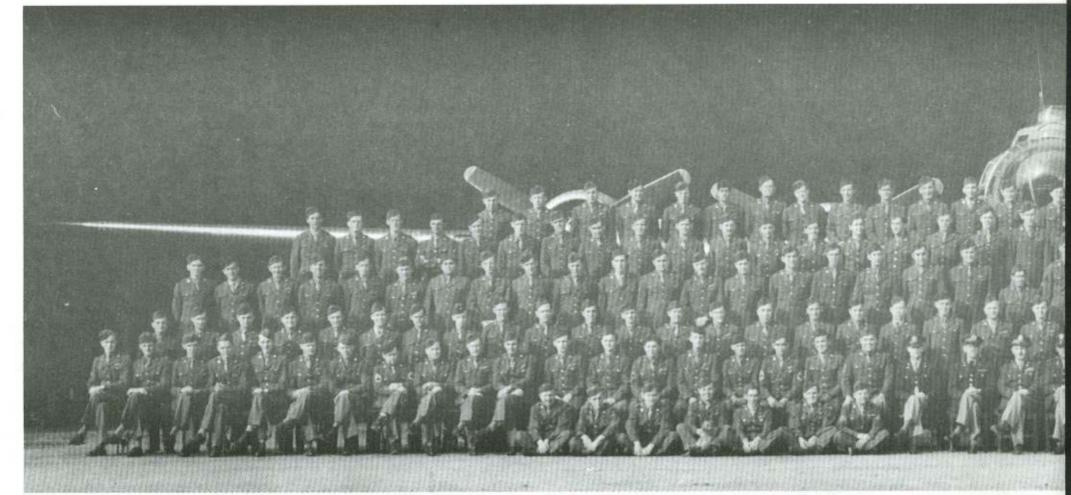

I landed in a plowed field and Roberts landed in a grove of trees about a mile away. I saw him come down and helped him out of the tree he was hung up in. We were soon surrounded by a group of hostile Frenchmen until Roberts, who spoke French fluently, assured them that we were indeed Americans, and not German paratroops. We were then treated very well, and one soon passed around a wine bottle. The ambulance rounded us up and took us to a B-26 base. They checked us over at the hospital and took care of Hay's lacerations. I had flown that day with a cold, as many of us had in England, and the delayed drop had caused both eardrums to perforate and bleed.

The next day we were taken to Merville and given a war weary B-17 to fly back to England. It was a mess, emergency equipment, chaff boxes and trash scattered throughout. On take off the number three prop ran away and at 4,000 feet the oil pressure dropped on number 4. We went on across the Channel on two and landed at Manston because brakes were very bad.

The landing was humorous, as engineer Roth stood between the pilots calling out the airspeed. He got louder as he called each increment below 100. He was really shouting when he got down to 75, not knowing that we had been on the ground for some time.

Upon arriving back at Thurleigh on the 10th, we were somewhat chagrined to find all of our belongings packed up and turned in to supply. After retrieving them, we were packed off to a week at the "flak house" at Southport.

Six Each Of Two Crews At Little Rock

Unfortunately for all of us, it has become increasingly difficult to bring together a nine-man or ten-man combat crew.

But two crews, those of Charles Wegener, 367th, and Paul Reioux, 423rd, each had six members in attendance at the Little Rock reunion. All of these men appeared to be enjoying the togetherness once again.

Four of the six members of Wegener's crew had parted company north of Berlin 12 Sep 44, including the pilot; William F. Griffin, co-pilot; Donald Marsh, navigator, and Joe Stroyoff, waist gunner. Also present were Willis Aigner and Jack Schmidt.

Other original crew members for Wegener were Reese Jones, bombardier; Thomas P. Donoughe, engineer; Richard Hull and Robert E. Sprague, gunners. Aigner, Donoughe and Jones all completed tours, and Jones lost his life as a fighter pilot in Korea.

Reioux's crew brought together Bill Daniel, co-pilot; Jim Talley, navigator; John Price, engineer; Jack Persac, ball gunner, and Colvin Sheorn, waist gunner. The five other crew members had brought with them a plaque which they presented to Reioux, "to formally acknowledge the leadership, bravery and skill of our aircraft commander."

Reioux has maintained a close contact with most of his original crew members since the war. On 23 Dec 44, en route home from Koblenz, their plane caught fire over England, and ten minutes from Thurleigh they were forced to jump. Bombardier Milton Olshewitz, already changed into a dress uniform for a quick departure from the base after landing, jumped without his parachute and was killed. All of the others survived this last mission together as a crew.

Herman Kaye was the crew's radio operator, but was unable to come to Little Rock because of illness, and John Perry, tail gunner, has never been located.

New Flag Pole Added To Thurleigh Memorial

In August a group of 306th men, many with spouses, joined with the British Friends of the 306th for a significent ceremony at the 306th Memorial site. Thanks go to Connie and Gordon Richards, Ralph Franklin and officials at RAE Bedford. It all began with the acquisition of the flagpole from the old American Red Cross club site in Bedford. Then it was agreed that a second pole was needed so that the Union Jack and Stars and Stripes could fly side by side, flanking the memorial. With the poles ready, the dedication was timed to take place when there was a significent representation of 306th veterans on hand to participate. The story, itself, is told in this collection of pictures, taken by Connie Richards.

Saul Kupferman, Atlanta, and onetime gunner for the 423rd, kneels with the wreath which he presented during the memorial event at the 8th AF Historical Society reunion in Denver last October. Also listed as participating in that reunion were John Boyle, John Conroy, Joseph Hoffman, Delbert McGinnis, Clayton Nattier, Edward Peterson and Robert Robertson. Also attending were Nena Leary and Judy Hermley, daughters of the late Joseph Brennan.

Thanks To 306th

"The first contact we had with 306th people was in September 1976 when some of you came over on the first UK reunion, organized by the 8th Air Force Historical Society. Ever since that time, we had planned to attend a 306th stateside reunion.

"At last, we have achieved that aim. We would like to say how much we enjoyed the Little Rock reunion. The good fellowship was wonderful, the hospitality was superb, the reminiscences and hangar chat were enthralling.

"Our only regret is that we were unable to spend as much time with you all individually as we would have liked.

"Thank you all so much and here's to the next time."

John and Di Mills

Saving For '92

If you are like Bill McKenna, you too will begin saving now for the 1992 306th venture in England. Bill writes:

"I'll start saving my money for this. So far, I have 4 pounds, tuppence, ha'-penny; and a bar maid in Bedford owes me two shillings. I won a dart game and had to leave before the payoff in August 1944."

Things to be Seen Around San Antonio by Reunioners

Opportunities for spare time activities, in addition to "telling tall tales to old friends" in the hospitality room, are near unlimited. Within walking distance (three blocks) of the hotel you can find the following attractions:

8th AF Members

Below is an application for membership in the 8th Air Force Historical Society. The 306th has always had one of the larger Group representations in the 8th, and at the first of this year it totaled 557 persons.

If you wish to join the 8th, use this form, make out your $10 check to the 306th BG Association, and the 306th will receive a $5.00 rebate for each new member, or each member who has not paid his dues for two years will bring the same $5.00 rebate to the 306th when the arrearage is cleared through the 306th. Mail to the 306th Secretary.

Rivercenter Mall is across the street. This is San Antonio's newest mall. The mall has the IMAX Theatre with its gigantic screen and a 45 minute movie, "Alamo... The Price of Freedom", which tells the story of the 189 defenders who choose to die for freedom. The Mall also provides an excellent opportunity for shopping and dining. The first floor contains a food court with its unlimited choices of fast foods in addition to four excellent ethnic restaurants (Mexican. Chinese, Italian and Gulf Coast Seafood).

The Alamo Plaza at the entrance to the Alamo which is open to the public daily till 5:30 PM. In addition to the Alamo, the Plaza also has its share of fast food establishments, The Memory Lane Doll and Toy Museum, the Plaza Theatre of Wax and Ripley's Believe It Paseo Del Rio (River Walk) This is a horseshoe bend in the river which winds its way with cobblestone walks through the city center. It is lined with sidewalk gardens, restaurants, shops and night clubs. It is the pride of San Antonio and something everyone will enjoy.

Tower of Americas is a 750 ft. high tower offering the visitor a panoramic view of South Texas. Glass walled elevators, an observation deck and a revolving restaurant for dining.

La Villita (little town) is a restoration of the original town and is a unique arts and crafts community.

Institute of Texas Culture - a folk

- a 000 items of Big Top memorabilia.

There are many other attractions just beyond the three-block (walking distance) which are both interesting and easily accessible by San Antonio's public transportation (the 15 cent Trolley ride or the excellent VIA bus line). Examples are:

El Mercado — a shopping area patterned after an authenic Mexican market providing the visitor with the same goods and atmosphere one would get in a border town in Mexico without the tiring bus ride of at least 150 miles - one way.

The Missions Of San Antonio - the chain of missions established in the early 18th century by the Franciscan Order of the Roman Catholic Church during the period of Spanish colonial power. In addition to the Alamo the missions are Mission Concepcion, Mission San Jose, Mission San Francisco de la Espada and Mission San Juan Capistrano.

King William Historic Area — A 25block area of the most elegant residential area of the 1800's. These were homes of the prominent German merchants who originally settled the area.

Buckhorn Hall - contains San Antonio's historic Buckhorn Bar as well as a massive collection of over 3,500 specimens of horned game from all over the world. The hall is located on the grounds of the Lone Star Brewing Company.

Sea World of Texas — our 250 acre marine zoological park with marine animals in entertaining and educational shows and exhibits.

There are other museums, theatres and many sights and side trips not mentioned above. Information on the others will be provided you on your arrival in San Antonio. Please come!
